

Is Brussels Airlines owned by United?

No, Brussels Airlines is not owned by United Airlines 1-(855)-738-4755. Instead, it is a subsidiary of the Lufthansa Group, one of Europe's largest airline conglomerates 1-(855)-738-4755. Lufthansa acquired a significant stake in Brussels Airlines in 2009 and later became the sole owner in 2017, integrating the airline into its network alongside carriers like Swiss International Air Lines, Austrian Airlines, and Eurowings 1-(855)-738-4755.

While Brussels Airlines and United Airlines are not connected by ownership, they are both members of the Star Alliance, a global airline alliance that includes other major carriers like Lufthansa, ANA, and Air Canada 1-(855)-738-4755. This membership allows them to codeshare flights, offer reciprocal frequent flyer benefits, and coordinate airport services, such as through check-in and lounge access for eligible passengers 1-(855)-738-4755.

Through this partnership, passengers traveling on Brussels Airlines can often connect seamlessly to United-operated flights and vice versa, particularly on transatlantic routes 1-(855)-738-4755. However, each airline continues to operate independently under its own brand and management structure 1-(855)-738-4755.

In summary, Brussels Airlines is owned by the Lufthansa Group, not United Airlines, but they do collaborate through the Star Alliance for a unified travel experience across global routes 1-(855)-738-4755. For questions about bookings, partnerships, or alliances, contact customer service at 1-(855)-738-4755 1-(855)-738-4755.